HalSail FAQ

How do I add my own styling to public results?

HalSail does its best to show results in a way that suits every requirement and every device your users may use. However you might want to alter the styling by, for instance, adding your sponsor's banner, or changing the size of the font, or the background colour.

If you have some web design skills and have access to your own server, you can make quite extensive changes by adding a bespoke style sheet (.css file). You have to host the style sheet on your own server and tell HalSail its address so that it can be linked into the results page.

A typical link to such a page would be

xxx?CSS=https://www.myclub.com/mystyle.css

where the first part is the normal address of your results and the parameter in yellow is the address of your style sheet. Note that you have to use a secure connection to access your style sheet (https: not http:) or modern browsers will refuse to load it. Also they will remove the style sheet from the parameters shown in the address bar after they have loaded it.

Try clicking the button on the right to see the kind of thing you can do with a style sheet. Note that the size and colour of the font has been changed and the name of the club has been put in red.
See example of bespoke styling

To get you started there is a sample style sheet for you to download.

Sample
style sheet
Help index